Are Emily and Greg More Employable Than Lakisha and Jamal?

Bertrand, M., & Mullainathan, S. (2004). Are Emily and Greg more employable than Lakisha and Jamal? A field experiment on labor market discrimination. American Economic Review, 94(4), pp. 991-1013.

Abstract

We perform a field experiment to measure racial discrimination in the labor market. We respond with fictitious resumes to help-wanted ads in Boston and Chicago newspapers. To manipulate perception of race, each resume is randomly assigned either a very African American sounding name or a very White sounding name. The results show significant discrimination against African-American names: White names receive 50 percent more callbacks for interviews. We also find that race affects the benefits of a better resume. For White names, a higher quality resume elicits 30 percent more callbacks whereas for African Americans, it elicits a far smaller increase. Applicants living in better neighborhoods receive more callbacks but, interestingly, this effect does not differ by race. The amount of discrimination is uniform across occupations and industries. Federal contractors and employers who list "Equal Opportunity Employer" in their ad discriminate as much as other employers. We find little evidence that our results are driven by employers inferring something other than race, such as social class, from the names. These results suggest that racial discrimination is still a prominent feature of the labor market.

| Variables | Descriptions |
|------------|--|
| call | Was the applicant called back? (1 = yes; 0 = no) |
| ethnicity | indicating ethnicity (i.e., "Caucasian-sounding" vs. "African-American sounding" first name) |
| sex | indicating sex |
| quality | Indicating quality of resume. |
| experience | Number of years of work experience on the resume |
| equal | Is the employer EOE (equal opportunity employment)? |

1) Construct a logistic model to predict if the job applicant was called back using experience as the predictor variable.

2) Plot the raw data and the logistic curve on the same axes.
```

```
B0 = summary(jobxp.mod)$coef[1]
B1 = summary(jobxp.mod)$coef[2]

plot(jitter(call,amount=0.1)~experience,data=resume.names) curve(exp(B0+B1*x)/(1+exp(B0+B1*x)),add=TRUE, col="red")

3) For an applicant with 3 years of experience, what does your model predict is the probability of this applicant getting called back?

The model predicts that the person with 3 years of experience has a 0.06 probability of getting called back.

x = 3
logit(B0, B1, x)
[1] 0.06646115
rm(x)
```

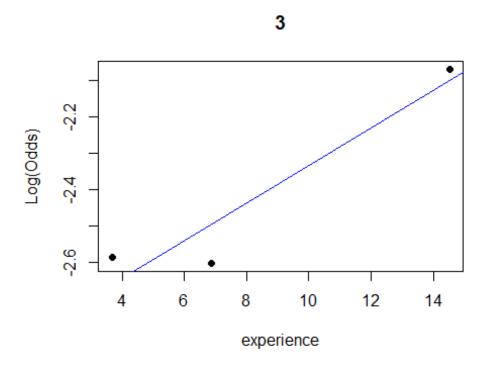

4) Construct an empirical logit plot and comment on the linearity of the data. The data is, of course, most linear with only two points. 5 points appears to be the best fit for the data, since 6 and up appear to have dots further away from the line and points 4 and below either have too little data or are less ideal than the 5 pointed approach.

emplogitplot1(call~experience, data=resume.names, ngroups=5)

for(j in 2:7){emplogitplot1(call~experience, data=resume.names, ngroups=j, main=j)}

5) Use the model from question #1 to perform a hypothesis test to determine if there is significant evidence of a relationship between call and experience. Cite your hypotheses, p-value, and conclusion in context.

Hypotheses: - Ho: mean = 0 - Ha: mean != 0

p-value: less than 2.2e-16

We have evidence to support the alternative hypothesis that the true difference in means is not equal to 0. This means that there is significant evidence of a relationship between call and experience.

t.test(resume.names$call, resume.names$experience)

##

Welch Two Sample t-test

##

data: resume.names$call and resume.names$experience

t = -107.23, df = 4897.3, p-value < 2.2e-16

alternative hypothesis: true difference in means is not equal to 0

95 percent confidence interval:

-7.904345 -7.620501

sample estimates:

mean of x mean of y

0.08049281 7.84291581</pre>

6) Construct a confidence interval for the odds ratio for your model and include a sentence interpreting the interval in the context.

We are 97.5% confident that there will be an increase in the odds of a call back for applicants with more experience.

7) For each 5-year increase in experience, how does your model predict the odds will change for the applicant getting called back?

Based on the plot, it appears that as your experience increases, so does the odds that you will get called back.

sorted.resume.names = resume.names[order(resume.names$experience),] sorted.resume.names
```
